It Doesn't Pay, Son

if you think it pays, son, just consider the record of Herbert Repsold, and after you have done so it is hoped for your sake that you will change your mind.

. Young Repsold had much better opportunities in life, so far as money gives them, than the average boy. He had a fair education, and might have had better if he had so willed. He had money which he might have used to his own advancement or his own destruction. There was no fair walk of life that was not open to him. He might have lived to be honored, and to honor himself.

-instead, he decided that it paid to walk in the primrose path, and the primroses he chose were of deepest crimson. So it was that at 19 years of age he was a convicted burglar in a prison cell; and so it was that the other day, an escaped convict, he was found white and chilled unto death in the marshes about San Quentin. All that he might have been represented by the ghastly corpse of one who still was but a boy! His life's fair promise belied in that pulseless clay of shame!

Son, it does not pay, if ever for one lying moment you have fancied that it did, let the forlorn corse of this self-wrecked boy teach you better. He took the road on which you might lightly enter, and it led him to the slough of disgrace and destruction, and many a youth has similarly wrecked his life ere now, it does not pay, or, if it pay at all, it is in the base coin of shame.

If some boy will read and heed the lesson and warning told in the biography of Herbert Repsold, then his life will not have been wholly in vain, and out of its wreckage some flotsam of good may be plucked. but with that pitiful exception it serves as a story that infinitely better never had been told. Sacramento Union.

Locking the Door, etc.

Sacramento has discovered the fact that has been obvious to other cities that it is a backnumber in the matter of municipal improvements and appointments of a first class city. This is notoriously manifest through investigation of the fire department, which is taxed with gross neglect and inefficiency in not mastering the recent fatal fire at the St. Nicholas hotel in that burg. Inquiry discloses that the ladder companies have not had a drill for six months and that some of the apparatus closest to the burning hotel did not have drivers in the house to handle the teams when the summons came for action. Such a state of affairs strikes home to most towns after a disastrous visitation when the city council or other responsible body proposes reforms by which the stable door may be locked to prevent a recurrence. This is eminently proper if precautions are taken to prevent other calamities, but in most cases it is the sad fruit of experience that after the first excitement the public relapses into slumber to map placidly until awakened by another severe joit.

Of all branches of the public service the fire department should be the best, discipline should be of the most rigid character, politics should be excluded from consideration in the matter of appointments and the fitness of the individual fireman should be tested before he is named for the responsible duties he is likely to be called upon to perform at any moment.

Let a Referendum Decide

The editor of the Carson City News hits the nail squarely on the head when he advises the legislature to act on the irrepressible bill for removing the state capital to Reno, Winnemucca or elsewhere. The question should be settled forthwith as to allay all feeling of anxiety in the minds of real estate investors and those who desire to make improvements at Carson if it is the wish of the people that the capital should remain at its present location.

A referendum vote would bring the discussion to a focus and take it out of the forum of politics and party acrimony. Carson City is not the most central place for the capital but, since removal involves the outlay of a million or two dollars, ly is almost certain that taxpayers are not going to rush blindly into a contract that would leave a legacy of debt to the state. Winnemucca may be the most central place from a geographical standpoint, but nothing is to be gained by haste. The way the railroad map of Nevada is being revamped by the leading transportation companies indicates a revolution in lines of travel that may soon leave Winnemucca and some other aspirants on sidetracks and elevate such places as Palisade, Austin or Eureka to the pivotal station. Nothing is to be gained by undue haste and rash moves involving enormous sums are to be deprecated at this time.

The hest advice to the taxpayers and for the taxpayers is to give the state a chance to develop its resources before undertaking any radical gerrymander in the interest of any particular section.

Brush up your Spanish. Comme la va, manana, chile con carne. Bring down the old grey rifle and file your teeth, for there is bound to be trouble and you may find a job on the border of the Rio Grande.
